DISCUSSION OF FOX'S HIT SERIES "24"
AT THE NATIONAL CONSTITUTION CENTER
As part of the members only Constitutional Culture Club series

PHILADELPHIA, PA (December 21, 2005) — Loyal fans of the Fox network's intense, dramatic series "24" know why this hit has earned 11 Emmy nominations over the past year. But how real is this "day-in-the-life" drama about federal agents combating terrorism and foreign enemies? National Constitution Center members are invited to participate in a discussion of the hit show on Thursday, January 19 from 6:00 p.m. – 7:30 p.m.

The discussion will be led by Anthony Green, Vice President for Programs and National Outreach at the National Constitution Center. Participants will look at constitutional issues in "24" scenarios, whether they are consistent with Constitution principles and relevant to issues in the news today.

The Culture Club is an exclusive offering for members of the National Constitution Center. The club meets monthly to discuss the current constitutional issues we encounter in our daily lives through the lens of new books, film, television, theater, and other cultural activities. Similar to a traditional book club, participants will be expected to have experienced the subject of the month before attending. Culture Club events are free of charge to National Constitution Center members.

Membership to the National Constitution Center is an easy way to become a part of history. Benefits include free admission for you or your family for one year, a 10% Museum shop discount, the Signature newsletter, members only discounts to National Constitution Center programs and membership to the Culture Club.
