

About iCIVICS

Founded by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, iCivics provides free lesson plans, games, and other resources for civic education. Our mission: to make learning and teaching about American government and civil society fun, exciting, and relevant to today.

what you'll find at www.iCivics.org

Games to Play

iCivics games are designed for classroom use, aligned to state standards, and include printable game-play reports. They've been played over two million times all across the country!

Executive Command: Run the country as President of the United States.

Do I Have a Right? Run a constitutional law firm and vindicate the rights of clients.

Counties Work: Grow a county and meet the demands of residents.

Argument Wars: Debate historical Supreme Court cases.

The People's Pie: Balance the federal budget while keeping the citizenry happy.

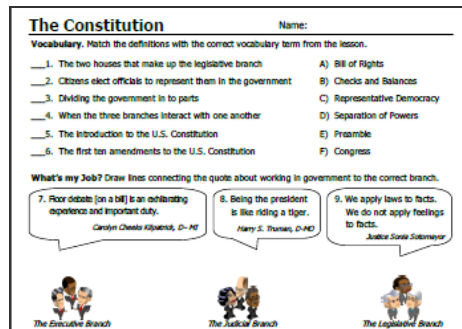

Activate: Pick an issue and make a difference in the community.

Lesson Plans to Teach iCivics lesson plans cover the breadth of civic education topics. Engaging, high-quality, and easy-to-use, these resources help teachers meet high standards easily.

Over 40 lessons in such topics as:

Foundations of Government · Legislative Branch · Executive Branch · Judicial Branch · State & Local Government · Politics & Public Policy · Budgeting · Citizenship & Participation · Persuasive Writing

Other Resources

Additional interactive features available at iCivics includes Web quests, classroom PowerPoint decks, and compelling videos. We're always growing—in 2012, we'll offer Argumentation Modules to teach advanced writing skills.

Start learning and get involved today at www.iCivics.org!