NATIONAL CONSTITUTION CENTER ANNOUNCES MEMBERS OF COALITION OF FREEDOM ADVISORY BOARD

The Coalition of Freedom Advisory Board will oversee three-year constitutional initiative made possible by the John Templeton Foundation

Philadelphia (February 4, 2014) – The National Constitution Center in Philadelphia is pleased to announce the members of its new scholarly Coalition of Freedom Advisory Board, co-chaired by leaders of the Federalist Society and the American Constitution Society. The new board was created to oversee a three-year initiative made possible by a $5.5 million grant from the John Templeton Foundation to increase awareness of the rights set forth in the United States Constitution and other founding documents. The initiative will bring together the best scholars in America to participate in Town Hall constitutional debates across America and to create the best non-partisan Interactive Constitution on the web.

The Coalition of Freedom board is composed of 27 constitutional scholars from across the political spectrum, and it is co-chaired by Lee Otis, Senior Vice President and Faculty Division Director of the Federalist Society, and Caroline Fredrickson, President of the American Constitution Society for Law and Policy. It also includes scholarly co-chairs Richard Pildes, Sudler Family Professor of Constitutional Law at New York University School of Law, and Nicholas Quinn Rosenkranz, Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law Center and Senior Fellow at the Cato Institute. The board includes the leading constitutional scholars in America, who come from institutions including Georgetown University, Yale University, University of Pennsylvania, Princeton University, Stanford University, and more. The board will offer guidance and ensure non-partisanship as the National Constitution Center, through the generosity of the Templeton Foundation grant, creates the best Interactive Constitution on the web; holds playwriting, short-story and essay contests for students; schedules on-site and traveling Town Hall debates; and holds a contest that challenges public and independent school teachers to create plans to increase constitutional literacy in their schools. The contest includes prizes of up to $100,000 for the winning schools and $10,000 for the winning students in Philadelphia and Pennsylvania.

In addition to the co-chairs, the Advisory Board members will include:

Akhil Amar, Yale University Randy Barnett, Georgetown University Richard Beeman, University of Pennsylvania James Ceaser, University of Virginia Dean Erwin Chemerinsky, University of California – Irvine Michael Dorf, Cornell University Pamela Edwards, Jack Miller Center Richard Epstein, New York University Amanda Frost, American University Robert George, Princeton University John Harrison, University of Virginia Sanford Levinson, University of Texas Michael McConnell, Stanford University Anthony Peacock, Utah State University Dean Robert Post, Yale University Jack Rakove, Stanford University Kermit Roosevelt, University of Pennsylvania Jeffrey Rosen, National Constitution Center Ilya Shapiro, Cato Institute Geoffrey Stone, University of Chicago Alan Tarr, Princeton University Elizabeth Wydra, Constitutional Accountability Center Michael Zuckert, University of Notre Dame

"We are honored that this extraordinary group of constitutional scholars has agreed to serve on the Coalition of Freedom Advisory," said Jeffrey Rosen, president and CEO of the National Constitution Center. "In these polarized times, it's crucial for there to be one place in America where citizens of all perspectives can converge to educate themselves about our constitutional liberties. These ideologically diverse and academically inspiring scholars will help the National Constitution Center become a convening platform for civil constitutional dialogue."

The Coalition of Freedom Advisory Board will oversee the following projects:

INTERACTIVE CONSTITUTION

The Coalition of Freedom will create the best non-partisan Interactive Constitution on the web, commissioning the leading scholars in America to write white papers and explanatory material about all provisions of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. The scholars will write a common statement about the settled law and history relating to each constitutional provision as well as separate statements making their distinctive perspectives clear. The scholars will be chosen in consultation with the heads of the Federalist Society and the American Constitution Society, who are co-chairing the scholarly advisory board. The Interactive Constitution will be developed in partnership with the College Board, which recently announced requirements that all SAT and AP U.S. History and Government test takers study the Founding Documents.

PLAYWRITING AND ESSAY CONTESTS

Students in 6th, 8th and 12th grades in the Philadelphia region and then across the nation will have the opportunity to participate in either a playwriting or essay contest. The playwriting competition will ask students to imagine what Mrs. Elizabeth Willing Powel said next when Benjamin Franklin told her the Founders had created: "A republic, madam, if you can keep it." For the essay competition, students will be asked questions such as: "What do people misunderstand or not know that is critical to protecting fundamental freedoms?" The winning playwright will have his/her work produced and presented at the National Constitution Center.

DEBATES, BLOG POSTS AND PODCASTS WITH SCHOLARS

Leading conservative, classical liberal and liberal scholars will participate in the National Constitution Center's Town Hall debates, blog posts and podcasts. In partnerships with organizations including the Federalist Society, the American Constitution Society, Intelligence Squared U.S. and the Jack Miller Center, the National Constitution Center will gain national reach through traveling debates throughout the United States. Americans will better understand the historic roots and current significance of their natural rights and liberties and be inspired to debate and defend them.

FIVE-YEAR LESSON PLAN AND SHORT-STORY WRITING CONTEST

Through this grant, the National Constitutional Center will also present short story and educator contests in the City of Philadelphia and throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania that will promote the importance of the Founding Documents and constitutional literacy for today's young people. The contests will offer cash prizes up to $10,000 for students and up to $100,000 for schools. The contests will be offered three times over the grant period – Fall 2015, Fall 2016, and Spring 2017.

Five-Year Lesson Plan

Educators in Philadelphia public and independent schools will be invited to develop five-year plans to improve constitutional literacy in their classrooms and earn cash prizes for their schools. The first place prize is $100,000, second place is $50,000, and third place is $25,000. The contest will expand in years two and three to include teachers throughout the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Short-Story Writing Contest

Eleventh grade public and independent school students in Philadelphia will be invited to develop short stories based on the theme "Liberty and Virtue." The student with the winning story will receive $10,000 and the runner-up will receive $5,000. Winners of the first contest will be announced in December 2015 at the National Constitution Center. The contest will expand in 2016 and 2017 to include all Pennsylvania schools.
