

KERRY SAUTNER
Chief Learning Officer
National Constitution Center

Dr. Kerry Sautner, Ed.D., is the chief learning officer at the National Constitution Center. In her current role, she oversees all aspects of the public's on-site experience and leads the Center's national education efforts. Through various platforms, Sautner drives the development and distribution of programs and online offerings that make the Center the nation's leading constitutional education resource. Sautner also leads the development of interactive programs for students, teachers, and the public; theatrical productions; educational videos; and standards-based classroom materials available on-site and online.

Before joining the staff at the National Constitution Center in 2005, Kerry Sautner worked in programs, training and program development at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia. She also served as an adjunct professor of education at Drexel University, where she focused on science teaching methods and learning theories for K-12 teachers.

Kerry Sautner obtained her doctorate in education leadership and management from Drexel University with a focus on creativity and innovation within educational facilities. Her dissertation focused on the examination of a program she developed for the National Constitution Center entitled, Policing in a More Perfect Union. This program uses storytelling and the museum's exhibits to provide in-depth insights and social justice training for police recruits and in-service officers. She also holds a master's degree in education from Drexel University and a bachelor's degree in biology and marine science from Rutgers University.

Kerry Sautner is on the executive board of the Civics Renewal Network and National History Day Philadelphia. She is the vice chair of the League of Women Voters Philadelphia, a board member of the Narberth Civic Association, a member of the American Association of Museums and the National Council for the Social Studies, and she serves on the Narberth Civil Service Commission. She has edited content for The New York Times, consulted on content for Scholastic, been quoted in Education Week as well as numerous regional media outlets, and her academic writings have appeared in the Journal of Museum Education. She is the 2011 recipient of the International Museum Theater Alliance Award.

Kerry Sautner is an active and engaged citizen of Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, where she resides with her husband and two sons.
