

THOMAS DONNELLY
Senior Fellow for Constitutional Studies
National Constitution Center

Thomas Donnelly is senior fellow for constitutional studies at the National Constitution Center. His focus at the Center has been creating content for the Center's Interactive Constitution, a leading online resource exploring each provision of the Constitution; the Civil War and Reconstruction: The Battle for Freedom and Equality exhibit, the first gallery in America devoted to exploring the constitutional debates and key figures central to the formation and ratification of the Reconstruction Amendments; America's Town Hall programming; and We the People podcasts with Jeffrey Rosen. Donnelly's specialties include constitutional theory, American political development, and American constitutional history (particularly, the Reconstruction era).

Prior to joining the National Constitution Center in 2016, Thomas Donnelly served as counsel at the Constitutional Accountability Center, as a Climenko Fellow and Lecturer on Law at Harvard Law School, and as a law clerk for the Hon. Thomas Ambro on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

He is the recipient of the Judge William E. Miller Prize for best paper on the Bill of Rights. His academic writings have appeared in The Yale Law Journal, the Wisconsin Law Review, and Constitutional Commentary, among other law journals, and he has written popular pieces for various outlets, including The Washington Post, The Atlantic, The New Republic, Politico, Slate, Washington Monthly, Talking Points Memo, CNN.com, The Huffington Post, The Hill, and several regional newspapers throughout the country.

Thomas Donnelly is a graduate of Yale Law School, where he was a projects editor for The Yale Law Journal and a Coker Fellow.

Before receiving his law degree, Thomas Donnelly worked as an analyst at the Mellman Group, a polling firm. He received his bachelor's degree, summa cum laude, in government and philosophy from Georgetown University.

Thomas Donnelly lives in Princeton, New Jersey, with his wife, son, and dog.
